Applying Biblical Truth and Humor to the Struggle.

Things I Want to Know, but Don't Know Whom to Ask

1. If the "gay church" is accurate- and God inflicts homosexuality onto a species to control overpopulation- might ten percent of the cockroaches in New York City be lez?

2. Might things have turned out differently for me if my mother had been more Exodus-savvy and, upon seeing me with a face full of her make-up at age 9, had interceded with something stronger than "now go clean up before supper, dear"?

3. Why is there a recipe folded in my Bible and who put it there?

4. If, as a child, having a healthy relationship with one's father can prevent homosexuality as an adult, could developing a good rapport with one's dog discourage bestiality?

5. Why are they called "adult bookstores" if no adult is ever seen selling, buying, or reading a book inside?

6. Are there cross-dressers in the Ku-Klux-Klan? How would you spot them?

7. As I continue on in recovery, why is it that when I envision myself in a heterosexual relationship, I want a Godly, Bible-believing female? But, when I envision myself in a homosexual relationship, tend to want a male who is passionate, sex-starved, and agnostic?

8. Could the real story behind animal extinction be traced back to Noah being too distracted by the rain to ponder the significance of the male woolly mammoth boarding the ark with coordinated luggage?

9. Have there been times when I've caused my guardian angel to blush, cringe, vomit, drink, go temporarily blind, or submit a transfer request?

10. I've always considered Eve an undeniable idiot for being deceived by a chatty reptile pushing fruit. But how well would I have fared, in the same circumstance, if the fruit had been an Oreo and the serpent Orlando Bloom?
